

Comment From Columbia

By Henry W. Patterson.

New York City, January 28. — "There is a special quality of goodness in the American people, in which one is compelled to believe as one believes in the rotundity of the earth. I make the point shyly. I am somewhat afraid of it myself. It is unscientific. It is also embarrassing. To speak of goodness (in this chill day of economic determination) is like broaching a love in public, or setting down a small, sweet flower in the market-place of ideas, most of whose intellectual merchants are equipped with poison fangs for dealing with tender moments."

Sam Grafton wrote that. Sam's a serious, young columnist with the most compelling style of anyone in the newspaper business today. Ask the man in the street with the copy of the New York Post just what he likes most in the paper. "That guy Grafton," he'll tell you.

On December 19 Sam wrote: "So you go to the average man and you say to him: 'Let us defend democracy.' He says O.K. He stops at the door for a moment and he asks: 'You don't mean going to war, do you? I don't like that. No, you tell him. He says O.K. He says, 'I don't like war, O.K., he says. That was the situation as of May. Even of mid-summer when conscription went through. (Mr. Grafton goes on to show how the campaign for the presidency in all its bitterness and noise, made the little man think less of the slogan: 'Save the world for democracy.' Its strife made him forget the determination to be up and doing to save the world. There was hatred, lying and self-seeking. It was a time of spiritual disasters." He went on: "That cramping grip of cynicism which constricted France begins to take hold. It is called a moral lag; it is a kind of tiredness; the dream has been stumbling along too rough a road. This brings us to today. An honest approach to the problem may turn up the details of a sketch for saving ourselves."

Lend-Lease Bill.

Here's what Grafton wrote on January 14: "They say the bill means peace, they say the bill means war; yet it means many things beyond the capacity of monosyllabic minds. The bill dedicates the state to a world ideal. It is a full-blown roster in comparison with the pale chickadee of the League of Nations. It is an expansion of our citizenship so that Mr. Jones becomes a burgher of freedom everywhere, regardless of geography. We think of France, huddled behind her Maginot Line; that great line which said to the small nations of Europe that France would never come out from behind it to help them. It said the hell with hope, we'll take care of it. It was so 'realistic' and 'practical' that it killed the country it girdled and turned out in the end to be as rotten as the souls of the men who had planned it. It imprisoned the nation it pretended to guard, and it bleached its spirit to the whiteness of most small things that live under large structures. So for a year or two or three Mr. Jones will live under the hope of freedom for everybody rather than behind a wall to save his own freedom!"

Of Isolationists and Ostriches. The 'split' in the Republican party over the lend-lease bill didn't escape Grafton's eagle eye. After Taft and (Continued on Page Four)

DR. NOYES GIVES LAST LECTURE OF THE SERIES

English Poet Speaks in Moyses Hall Today

PUBLIC WELCOME

Relationship of Poetry and Reality Will Be Topic; Public Invited

"The Relationship of Poetry and Reality" will be the topic of the address to be given by Dr. Alfred Noyes this afternoon at 5 p.m. in Moyses Hall. This will constitute the third and last of a series of talks being given by the visiting English poet.

The doors of the auditorium will be again opened to the public, as was the case in the last lecture, given on Monday. Outsiders will be admitted immediately after the recipients of special invitations have been seated.

Since over six hundred persons attended the first two lectures those who intend to be present this afternoon have been advised to come early if they wish to be seated. Dr. Noyes, in his last lecture on Monday, emphasized the spiritual fundamentals of poetry and deplored their dearth as such, in the modern poems which he has contacted. It is expected that he will devote today's discussion to the other side of the question, the relationship of poetry and the material.

STUDENTS HEAR EPILEPSY TALK

Dr. Penfield Speaks to Medical Undergrads

Slides Shown on Electrical Activity of Brain in Epilepsy

Emphasizing the necessity for students, and especially McGill students, to question the authority of their professors on the latest aspects of medical knowledge Dr. Wilder Penfield of the Neurological Institute outlined a personal philosophy of medical education and a theory of Epilepsy to a meeting of the University Medical Undergraduate Society last night. Dr. Herbert Jasper, also of the Institute presented a slide lecture on "The Electrical Activity of the Brain in Epilepsy."

In approaching a specific problem of knowledge, Dr. Penfield maintained, the student should not take his professor's word on the subject as final. He felt that perhaps there was no final authority or final truth. The student should be obligated to study various authorities in the field. It was not necessary for one to travel from university to university, or clinic to clinic, though attendance at more than one university was recommended. There was much to be said, the speaker stated, for the old German and English system of attending various noted centres of learning.

Plumbers' Ball Held In Gym on Feb. 28th

The "Plumbers' Ball," the Annual Formal Dance sponsored by the Engineering Undergraduates Society, will be held on February 28th, in the Sir Arthur Currie Memorial Gymnasium. The price of the tickets, which will go on sale about the beginning of February, is $4.00 per couple.

The aid of architectural students in planning the decorations has been promised, and although the theme has not yet been decided upon, there is no doubt the architects' high standard of quality will be maintained. Tom Harvie, who did the sets for last year's Red & White Revue, is in charge of the decorations.

Vic Savage, the chairman of the Ball committee, made it clear that though the ball is sponsored by the Engineers it is not limited exclusively to the Plumbers; in fact, the support of the entire university is necessary to make the affair a success.

Other committee members were Bill Hayman, in charge of publicity; Dave Haviland and Cliff Morse, tickets and table reservations; J. Maw and Rex Freeman, floor furnishings and checkings; and Bill Weber, music and entertainment.

DOCTOR HENDEL GRANT TO DISCUSS LIFE IN ENGLAND

Ex-Dean Heads American Philosophical Society

'Spirit of Man' Is Topic of Address to Gathering Here Friday

Visiting Montreal primarily to address the McGill Philosophical Society Dr. Charles Hendel, former Dean of the Faculty of Arts and Science, will speak on Friday evening to a public gathering in the Arts Building. The subject will be substantially the same as the one he discussed before the American Philosophical Society on his inauguration as president. It will deal mainly with reflections on the spirit of man.

For the past year Dr. Hendel has occupied the Chair of Moral and Social Philosophy at Yale University which position he took up on leaving McGill. It was felt by the Philosophical department that in view of the fact that this will be Professor Hendel's only opportunity to address McGill students that his lecture should not be restricted to those who are ordinarily connected with the activities of the society but made open to the general public.

DRIVE, BEAN FEAST PLAN OF PRE-MEDS

The Pre-Medical Society of McGill has organized a sleigh ride to take place on Friday evening commencing at 8.30 p.m.

Meeting at the Union the group will get upon the sleighs and after the ride will reassemble at the Union for a bean supper. Dancing and a marshmallow roast will follow the supper. The event is open to members of the society only. The price per person is 60 cents or $1.00 for a couple. These may be obtained from a member of the executive or can also be bought at the Tuck Shop in the Union.

VISIT BREWERY

Tour Will Supplement the Commerce Luncheon

To supplement the Commerce luncheon this year the Commercial Undergraduate Society has announced that a visit will be made to a local brewery on Thursday. The purpose of the tour was said to "inspect the plant and study the business from the point of view of a Commerce man," special attention being paid to surplus products and liquid assets.

A bus going to the establishment will leave the Union on Thursday at 2.30 p.m.

Reporter Contacts Sadie by Long Distance 'Phone Call

Wherein Is Recorded in Full Detail Advice Given by One Miss Hawkins, Spinster, of Dogpatch, Kentucky

By H. S.

At 8.32 yesterday evening, an historic moment in the life of this poor reporter, we picked up the telephone, and, with baited breath and reversed charges, made contact with Miss Sadie Hawkins, beautiful debutante of Dogpatch, Kentucky.

O Happy moment it is for posterity! All and sundry, from near and far, will be able to read the preserved words of Sadie Hawkins, the very same words which fell forth from those luscious, ruby-red lips. For not daring to trust to our own highly excited senses, we took the precaution of placing a stenographer in close proximity. And although his fingers quivered, his nostrils dilated, and his pulse raced in his choked up excitement, he was fortunately able to master his emotion in sufficient degree to scribble down the conversation, or a reasonable facsimile of the same. We can, therefore, thanks to that sterling demonstration of mind over matter, set down here a verbatim recording of the memorable conversation.

"Hello, hello, is this Miss Hawkins?"

"Oh, you kid."

"McGill Daily calling from Montreal, Miss Hawkins."

"Sho nuff? No kidding, you funny boy?"

"We'd like very much to ask a few questions."

"Shoot the questions to me, Daily boy."

"Miss Hawkins, a rather hectic week is being planned here at McGill, as you well know, and many co-eds are rather disconcerted (interruption here, and "worried" is substituted) at the expense involved in taking out several boys during the course of the week."

"No silver shekels, huh?" She seemed sympathetic.

"What would you advise, Miss Hawkins?"

"No money, no gold, silver, dollars, no filthy lucre, huh?"

"That is the idea, Miss Hawkins."

"Call me Sadie, chump. And quit the gabbing, let's go. Yeh Man, sho (Continued on Page Four)

Ted Ford Plays for Annual Cosmos Ball

Various dignitaries whose presence will make this year's event truly cosmopolitan include Their Excellencies the Consuls-General of the Netherlands and Greece, His Excellency the Consul-General of the Republic of Poland, the Trade Commissioners for the United Kingdom and for the British West Indies.

Tom Ford and his ten-piece band will furnish the music for the affair and additional entertainment will be provided by a bevy of campus and professional performers. The costume parade is scheduled to begin around midnight and valuable prizes will be awarded for the most interesting and original garbs.

BRITAIN NEEDS AID OF WOMEN

Mrs. Dimsdale Stresses Need for Prompt Action

Postwar Task Will Be to Restore 'Golden Rule' to World

"America, get at it and get at it quickly," advised Mrs. Marcus Dimsdale, Fellow of Newham College, Cambridge, speaking in the R.V.C. Common Room yesterday under the sponsorship of the Program Committee of the Women's Union. Mrs. Dimsdale stressed the urgency of the present situation and stated that we in Canada must help England at once, as much as we can, and be ready with our own A.R.P. for our own possible needs.

"Today is a proud moment for women; women and war in history have not been connected except an individual here and there, but now the ordinary woman has come into her own," the speaker continued. In previous wars women were not in the line of battle but in this war it is the women and children that are in the front lines. Hitler, in France, got them on the road in order to block our troop movements and there they stayed because the homes were in ruins. When he wanted the road he mowed them down with tanks. Hitler's present hold on the people of the countries he has subjugated is that if the men thwart him they will be punished by harm being done to their women and children.

The age of the girls who are attending college here is that which is the most important, in Germany those of that age have been brought up in a lack of truth, honour, and knowledge of history but an excess of duty to the state. The grace that is said three times a day is "We eat to live; we live to fight; if we do not fight, we do not deserve to live."

Better Way of Life

The job that we will face after the war is done will be to teach the boys and girls of Germany a better way of life, the speaker continued. Hitler broke the Golden Rule and destroyed a great deal of the kindness in the world and we must, by example and not by precept, restore this. Our King and Queen (Continued on Page Four)

ECONOMICS OF WAR LECTURES TO START SOON

Value of Blockade Will Be Dealt With

LECTURES START FEB. 4

Drs. Culliton and Thomas Will Conduct Series of Ten Lectures

"The Economics of the War"—a series of lectures dealing with the contribution of the blockade to the war effort, will be presented as an extension course, starting on February 4th. The lectures, presented under the auspices of the Department of Economics and Political Science, will be given by John Culliton, assistant professor of economics, and Dr. Brinley Thomas, visiting professor in the department.

Dr. Thomas has till lately been associated with the British Library of Information in New York, prior to this he was with the London School of Economics and is an expert on Swedish Economy. Professor Culliton is among other things an expert on the problems of the Canadian West.

The lectures consist of the following: "The Economics of Total War—the Mobilization of the Empire," by Dr. Thomas; "Canada's Financial Problem," Professor Culliton; "How Britain is Paying for the War," Dr. Thomas; "The Implications of the Sirois Report," Professor Culliton; "The Organization of Labor Supply in Britain," Dr. Thomas; "Canada's Foreign Exchange Control," Professor Culliton; "The United States as Britain's Arsenal," Dr. Thomas; "Western Canada and the War," Professor Culliton; "The Changing Face of Britain—Social Effects of the War," Dr. Thomas; and "Canadian-American Economic Co-operation," Professor Culliton.

Intercollegiate Debating

The Society has reduced its budget by $100 for the present year, due to war conditions. Hence intercollegiate debating has been reduced to a minimum. However, several Canadian universities, including Toronto, Queens, McMaster, Western, Laval, Bishop's and Osgoode Hall, have expressed their desire to debate here, and have also invited McGill to their Councils for friendly competition. Among the U.S. Universities planning Canadian Tours are Dartmouth, Middlebury, Boston University, Jonestown and St. Michael's.

At the meeting, plans will be completed for the finals in the Inter-class and Inter-faculty Debates, and the Competition for the Redford Challenge Trophy and the Talbot-Papineau Cup. The members will also discuss a tentative proposal that debates be arranged with other campus clubs, such as the Political Economy Club and the Sociological Society, and particularly such organizations as the Players' Club and the M.R.T.B. Band, which, though lacking in opportunities have nevertheless shown great interest in organized debate.

'A' Company Icemen Take Honours in Double Win

Hit the Trail

by Hawkeye

All of the older McGill skiers will remember Hickory Blades' famous column, "Calling all skiers." Hickory Blades managed to keep up a running fire of comments on skiing and all matters pertinent to it. He was appreciated most by the average skier who, though not experienced enough to enter into competition wished to take part in McGill ski activities. Hickory Blades devoted many of his columns to details of the famous Outing Club tours, and was responsible for the enthusiasm shown by all those who did take the organized trips with Jack Rabbit Johannsen and other tour leaders. Many people were agreeably surprised at the beauty of little known trails in the Laurentians within easy reach of all classes of skiers.

Little has been said to date about such tours. Hickory Blades has gone and up to date no successor has been found. Out of this sad state of affairs this column has sprung.

With the colder part of January over, and ski conditions quite good, the McGill Outing Club will hold their first tour of the season this coming Sunday, January 29. Acting on the advice of Johannsen, the tour will start from Ste. Marguerite station, and will follow the Johannsen East trail. This run is little travelled and is comparatively easy. It has the decided advantage of having a number of short cuts into C.P.R. stations, and is within the ability of all McGill skiers.

Those who wish to go on the tour are advised to take the first train up North Sunday morning, leaving Windsor station at 8.45 a.m. and arriving at (Continued on Page Four)

Army Skiers To Compete

Outing Club and Red Birds Co-sponsor Military Race

An innovation in the way of ski races will be sponsored by the McGill Outing Club in collaboration with the Red Birds Ski Club this week-end, when a military team race will be run off at St. Sauveur on Sunday. The time is set for 12 noon Eastern Daylight Saving Time, and cross-country men of A, B and C class can enter. Those who are competing will meet at the Red Bird Ski Cabin at St. Sauveur.

TWO TEAMS WANTED.

At least two teams of four men each are expected to be entered from the M.R.T.B. The time of the last man in the cross-country event will be the one that will count, and so strong teams, rather than a few starchy individuals, are desired as competitors. Among those entered from local units are teams from the R.M.R. and the Black Watch. If any one desires to race he should get in touch with Jack Bailey at DE. 1653 before Thursday noon.

The course will be about 7 miles long, and will follow a good part of the inter-company route of last week, so that it will be old ground to those who competed in the M.R.T.B. races. The McGill name gained a lot of prestige last Friday night, and now another opportunity is available to uphold the honour of the McGill Reserve Training Battalion.

Smith Paces Senior A Scoring with Two Goals

A Company faced C in the Forum yesterday afternoon in the second half of the A class Intercompany Hockey League. By nosing out C Company, 6-5, the A's moved up to second place and are thus tied with C Company.

FIRST PERIOD

The first stanza saw A company lose no time in getting started as Earl Smith landed the first goal in the first minute of play. A company did not keep the lead long, for a minute later, Grant Morrison of a company shot home his first goal. This fast pace was slackened after these two goals and no more were seen till the next period.

SECOND PERIOD

The second period was no sooner started when Harry Jay of A company tore down the ice and scored the third goal of the game. But C company refused to be left behind and swung into action. A minute after the puck was centered off, Hall of C company put one in the nets to tie the score. Both teams now fought hard to take the lead, and the score was again brought in favour of A company by Keay. C company were not to be caught napping so easily for Grant Morrison soon tied the score for his team. A and C company now raced neck and neck but neither team would give way. A company often broke through the C company's forwards but their shots were always ward off by goalie Morris. Then Hampson of C broke through and scored a minute before the whistle. The score at the end of the second period was 4-3 in favour of C.

THIRD PERIOD

The third frame was a reverse for C company. The science men were skating hard to keep their lead and it looked like their game when Young of C company put in another goal for his team. Then the unexpected happened and A company began to go wild. There was about ten minutes left to play when A began to break through the defence of their opponents. Borrowers of A company broke the scoring spell of C when his shot found its way in C's nets. Then A company began to move and were constantly through the C defence. The next goal was bagged by Smith of A company. Both he and Morrison of C company played a very good game. A and C were tied again, the score being 5 all. The winning goal was scored by Borrowers to end the game 6-5 for A.

The line-ups for the two teams were as follows:

Two week ends ago we had lunch with a former member of the McGill Glider Club, Harry Smith, who is now associated with the Sperry Gyroscope Company of New York. We note this not only because he deserves mention on his own account, having been one of the pillars of all club activities for several years, but also because we were told of a ride which he was given in a Schweizer two-seater sailplane by a member of the Airhoppers Club, of freak stunt fame.

The flight was very thrilling, by all accounts, especially during steeply-banked turns, when it would seem to be difficult to orientate oneself, and reconcile the movements of the turning aircraft to the whirling of a very top-sided Mother Earth. At the site where the flight was made machines were staying in the air half a day at a time, sustained by slope lift—currents of air deflected upwards by the face of a hill.

Nothing about all this is remarkable, except that it provides an excellent example of the aims of our own club and the possibilities which are still in store. The sequel to this story is what is significant.

Not long after Harry had had his flight—a matter of a week or so—the same pilot was making a flight with a student pilot and a serious crash occurred. Here again they were flying in the Schweizer two-seater, with the student attempting to handle the controls. Of course you are wondering why this little incident should receive pointed comment. The answer is that this is a very poor method of training—and has been accepted as standard in the United States.

Neither in England, nor in that country of which one of the few kindly remembrances is that it fostered gliding, nor in any other country that we know of, with the exception of the United States, is such a method of training used, except possibly in the form of a preliminary flight before the student has begun training—to give him a taste of what he is working for—and another when he is ready to begin soaring—to teach him the technique of staying within regions of lift and beating up and down the face of a slope.

In England the two-seater sailplane, of whatever type, is regarded as a difficult machine to fly, risky to any but experts, and expensive to repair and replace. In all fairness to U.S. sailplane manufacturers we are ready to grant that they may have developed a two-seater type which is easier to fly than the English types. But we still insist that they are too advanced for any except special advanced instruction, and are too expensive to repair to make it worthwhile risking them in the hands of a student.

More than all this the type of pilot produced by this training is worth some thought. Consider how he is training. When he flies he has an instructor along to tell him what to do. He learns by doing what he is told. Even after he has learned to control a machine with a considerable degree of apparent skill he is still unsafe in emergencies, as experience has often proven. The reason is that he has not had to learn to think for himself and he has not had to deal with the element of surprise by himself—he has always had his instructor in the other cockpit to get him out of any serious trouble.

Now what about the pilot produced by the method endorsed by the McGill Club and by other countries? In this method the pilot is alone from the time he first sits in the seat until he lands again. Granted it sounds rash—almost foolhardy—and it is occasionally marked by a broken wing-tip or a shaking up, but it does safely make a pilot who is ready for anything by the time he has finished his course of training. He is always on his own, and, although he is never permitted to get to a dangerous height until he is competent, he nevertheless is forced to think for himself every second he is in the air, and to apply the advice (Continued on Page Four)

Coeds Meet On Mountain

Skiers to Have Scrimmer for Coach This Week

The regular weekly coed outdoor ski class will take place as usual this Thursday on Mount Royal. Alec Scrimmer will take this week's class in the absence of George Swinton. The class will get under way at 4.15. Those desiring to take the lesson should be at the Park Slide on the dot to meet the coach. Instruction will be given on the surrounding slopes on how to twist, turn, stop and fall.

ALL WELCOME

These classes, which are mainly intended for beginners and intermediates, have been a part of the McGill Women's Ski Club programme for some years now, and have helped considerably in raising the standard of coed skiing. The Skiing Manager, Sylvia Grove, in an interview last night, extended a welcome to all newcomers interested in joining the class, and added that it should provide a good training field for future inter-section ski meets.

A list has been posted in R.V.C. and those intending to enroll in the series of classes should sign before noon on Thursday.

given him by his instructor with all the command his excitement will allow.

By this means a reliable, resourceful, clever pilot is produced without ever seriously endangering either the safety of an expensive airplane or the student's neck. When he is finished training he is ready for anything. No situation is a surprise, and he learns to deal with any contingency with a calm and coolness which had its roots in the first flights he made, when he was forced to correct his own errors by the application of his own personal judgment.

This is not intended to be a violent denunciation of the training methods at present in use in the United States. Their gliding fraternity is entitled to its own opinions and the best way to learn is through one's own errors. We do feel that they are rushing things a bit, however, and that they are largely failing to profit by the excellent examples set them by England and other countries.

We have a deep hope that the coming summer will see representatives of our own club at the Elmira competition in a competitive capacity. Then we shall at last have the opportunity we want. To see if the technique of the United States soaring pilot is as unpolished as it seemed to us when we saw the Elmira meet last summer—or if it is pure prejudice.

Comment From Columbia

By Henry W. Patterson.

Dewey and Hoover and Landon had come out against the bill, and the "chief," Willkie, had warmly supported it. Grafton made merry thus: "I do not know what future the Republicans are marching to, but the parade is parting in the middle. The boys have lost their road-maps and seem confused. What do the conservatives hope to snatch for themselves out of a world that is a burning grab-bag? (Then he referred to recent statements that 'socialism' was coming in Britain and that Europe would become exhausted and then Communism would engulf the continent). "Are these fears beginning to stir among the men who for years have had no heavier mental work to do than to hate Roosevelt and fight taxes? They appear frightened and uncertain. Their drift seems to be toward isolation. They are trying to collect their thoughts, under the pillow. What was that noise in the next room?"

Of Kennedy and Other Poor Thinkers.

"In the end he came out in favor of aid to Britain, and against the lease-lend bill. Of course he didn't go all the way in favor of helping England and he didn't go all the way against the lease-lend bill. He was sort of for one and sort of against the other in the most sort of sort of speech of the year. He is an articulator of indecision. The speech showed a fear of the Nazi power, and also of the money cost and the social cost of resisting it. Hundreds of men have been pinched into nothingness between these two fears. Mr. Kennedy's speech ought to be accepted as a classic statement of a modern political neurosis. Having accepted it as that, let us proceed about our business as if the speech had never been delivered."

Wave of the Future.

It was on January 23 that Grafton penned these lines: "The idea behind the 'wave of the future' is that a new kind of organization is inevitably coming into the world, that nobody can stop it, that it wears a cowlick and mustache in one country, what the hell. It's still the future! This idea hits democracy in the face, as with a wet towel, and is a special kind of family entrance into fascism, for the use of sweeter spirits. The future is coming, sure enough, but one man's future is another man's poison. (Then the columnist goes back to review the Nazi record of broken promises, bloodshed, black lies, and untold suffering.) That was the 'wave of the future, cigarette drooping from the corner of its mouth, hat over one eye, brass knuckles in the overcoat pocket."

Hitler's Technique: Will It Work in America?

"The same old damaged goods still stand on the same old bargain-counter, and are still finding buyers. Hitler pushed his ideological cart across Europe, hawking anti-Communism; he made sales everywhere. Witness the England's Cliveden set. Witness France's betrayal. Somewhere Hitler fascism made the discovery that many men prefer the loss of somebody else's liberty to the 'unfolding of human progress'; not because they are fascists, but because they are fearful and foolish. It is turned upon us now, to make us quit aid. Can we lick it?"

Sam Grafton is a man with keen mind and sharp wit. His style is unusually attractive. His thoughts are well-ordered. He is a seeker after truth. What is truth? Sometimes we feel we have the truth deep in our souls, and it turns out to be only an itch.

spectively. Peto was the high man for the losers, and his efforts netted eight points.

Pin. 27 vs. Pin. 25. The Engineers went down to another defeat in this contest, even though they put up a splendid fight. However, Pin. 27 was just a bit too good for the Plumbers, and after the smoke of battle had cleared away, they were found to be on top by the score of 22-17. Bullock was the "big shot" for the victors, netting 11 points. Dewitt was a close second for top honours as he garnered 10 points for the Engineers.

REPORTER CONTACTS SADIE BY PHONE

nuff! Urgent problem. Must concentrate. No money, huh? No coin. Can't take the Abners to the local jerms, huh? Can't go stepping every night? Can't get licked up, huh?" "Why, Miss Hawkins!" "Can the surprise and call me Sadie. Now look here, friend Daily Boy, you pass on the good word to the gals. I'll prescribe a real budget-cutting formula what will delight all the frails, verily, so, yeh man.

"Pass on the good word, Sadie." "It was difficult to actually call her by her first name.

"Write this on your cuff. One quart sassailla, nutmeg, 3 gallons of raw gin, pinch of dynamite, two old shoes, and a lot of lemon peel. Mix in a cement mixer in a vacant lot, and leave it pickle a while in the bath tub. Zowie! The Sadie Hawkins Special. Dogpatch Dreamer, we call it down here."

"Is that the solution to the problem?" We were mystified. "Sho nuff is, little one. Bottle the eye-opener in pint bottles and carry it on the hip. Licker up the boy friend when you call on him. No night spots. Only spots before the eyes. Wonderful time. He never knows what he is doing or saying, yes sirree. And no cost."

"Thanks very much, Miss Hawkins. Another question. Do any special problems usually arise during a Sadie Hawkins Week?"

"Well, only from drizzles."

"I beg your pardon, Sadie, but what is a drizzle?"

"A Drizzle, chump, is a gal what is going steady with a drip. Along comes Sadie Hawkins Week and she has got to take this drip out all the time. Cramps her style, see?"

"Perfectly, but we had better close this conversation soon, or it will cost you an extra five minutes."

"Well, just you tell me what is on the agenda, you cute kid. I make my entrance on Saturday, I

"And you put out the Daily on Sunday night. And don't forget the five cent tea dance on Monday."

"Also the Spinster's Spree on Friday."

"Yes, and perhaps there will be a special movie. But have you a last word to leave with us before your arrival?"

"Listen, old kiddo, you tell those silly boys in these new wallflower clubs not to give up the ship. If they get no invitations, well, I'll take them out myself."

And with this promise still ringing in our ears, Sadie Hawkins hoarsely bid adieu and hung up.

THEORY OF EPILEPSY

Discussing his theory of epilepsy Dr. Penfield advised that epilepsy should not itself be treated as a disease and should not be considered as such. It might, however, be the symptom of a disease. The doctor in diagnosing his case should ask himself two questions: where was the focus and what was the cause. He himself had found that though generally the cerebral cortex was normal it was in a varying physiological state. At the time of a fit the patient might appear to the doctor to be in such a state. On the other hand he might be in a fit and give no visible inclination of such a nature. The doctor might well see facial expressions and motor and eye conditions. His knowledge of sensory, visual and auditory sensations of the patient was limited to what the patient might tell him until further examination.

Dr. Jasper briefly mentioned the history of electroencephalography which began about 1875 with the work of Caton and received added impetus from the work of Berger at Jena during the years of 1914 to 1925. The development of the electroencephalogram which measured the brain potential in volts of the different types of seizures was thus a fairly recent invention. Epilepsy the speaker felt was due to excessive neural discharges. The form was related to localization rather than to the form of the electroencephalogram. This conclusion was upheld, he felt, by clinical and operative findings of his colleagues in the Institute.

have been a great help by showing a great deal of kindness when it is so needed.

Mrs. Dimsdale discussed the meaning of the evacuation of the children from the crowded cities to the country. The government sent them in their school groups under the care of their school mistresses and paid for their keep. When the Overseas evacuation was deemed necessary parents hesitated because the children would not be with their friends nor under the supervision of the mistress. Also the government paid nothing. When it was seen that the children were being well looked after and happy here parents were eager to send the children to safety.

P. DOUGLAS AIDS SURVEY

Ex-Montrealer Studies Axis Propaganda in America

Percy L. Douglas, graduate of McGill University, has acted as the head of an important mission, which has just completed a four-month survey of American business conditions in the Latin American countries. Mr. Douglas graduated in Engineering in 1924, and has been living in New York in recent years.

The study was undertaken as a defence measure and was sponsored by the State Department and other Government agencies, as well as by Nelson A. Rockefeller, co-ordinator of commercial and cultural relations between the American republics. The survey discovered that the United States business in Central and South America is being undermined by Axis supporters, who are spreading anti-American propaganda in newspapers and over the radio. It has also been found by the survey that some employees of these firms are actually officials of anti-American powers. Prior to Mr. Douglas' entry into McGill, he attended Lower Canada College and Bishop's College School, Lennoxville.

Club Hears Talk on Dunquerque Retreat

The R.V.C. Historical Club will hold its regular monthly meeting Thursday, January 30, at 768 Sherbrooke St. West. Two papers will be given by members of the club. Patricia Wheatley, a first year student, will discuss from first hand information some phases of the withdrawal at Dunquerque, and will also speak of the British evacuation at other points. The second paper will be given by Jean Clarke of Third Year, and will deal with the life of Theodore Roosevelt. The meeting will start at 8.30 p.m. sharp, and all members of the club are urged to attend.

McGILL MEDICAL DINNER

Dr. Foster Kennedy of New York Will Speak

The 50th annual dinner of the McGill Medical Society will be held at 7.00 p.m. Saturday at the McGill Union, 600 Sherbrooke street west. Dr. Foster Kennedy of New York City will be guest of honor and speaker. Dr. Kennedy is professor of neurology and psychiatry at Cornell University Medical College in New York, and is in charge of neurology at the Bellevue Hospital. He is one of America's leading neurologists, with a broad training in Great Britain and a distinguished career in neurology and psychiatry in the United States. He has also an outstanding war record.

Noted for his researches in such fields as the tumours of the frontal lobes of the brain, and in allergy and the central nervous system, he is well known to the medical profession of this city, having lectured at a symposium on war neuroses at the Montreal Neurological Institute in the fall of 1939.

tell better than all the books displayed how graceful and charming the ballet can be, with Leonide Massine, in his own "Beautiful Danube," and in scenes from other scores with Misa Slavenska, and Nathalie Krassovska.

The one thing which has helped to popularize the ballet has been left out of the exhibit, and that is the collection of dancing-girls' paintings by Edgar Degas. The death has been alleviated considerably, however, by photographs of Tamara Toumanova in typical Degas poses which, almost, but not quite, capture the fragile beauty of Degas' art.

Music and dance lovers should be enchanted with the exhibit, and anyone able to fully understand the delights in the Ballet Russe should see it, to give them a fuller and deeper understanding of what the ballet really is.
